Saline County election results: Republicans lead legislative and County Commission races in updated unofficial count

November 4, 2026

Updated Thursday, Nov. 5, with Saline County results as of 4:19 p.m. Thursday and statewide results as of 11:15 a.m. Thursday.

Republicans led in Saline County's contested Kansas House races and in the District 1 County Commission race in the county's updated unofficial results, posted Thursday afternoon. As in Wednesday's report, Election Day votes are in from 54 of the county's 56 precincts, all of them partially counted, and early and absentee ballots are in from 55 of 56 precincts.

The county's report, timed at 4:19 p.m. Thursday, counted 19,745 ballots of 32,410 registered voters, a turnout of 60.92%. That is four more ballots than the county's Wednesday afternoon report. Of those, 6,533 were early ballots, 1,262 were advance ballots and 11,950 were cast on Election Day.

Eaglecrest pancake feed raises $940 for Salina Fire Department fire-safety education

November 4, 2026

Eaglecrest Retirement Community presented the Salina Fire Department with $940 raised at its second annual pancake feed, the department said.

The pancake feed was held Oct. 3, with free-will donations going to the fire department's Prevention Division. Eaglecrest residents presented the money Nov. 3 during a tour of the new Fire Station 4.

The department said the money will be used to buy public education materials for fire-safety programs. Proceeds from last year's pancake feed helped pay for an inflatable fire-safety education house that traveled to elementary schools across Saline County this year.

Bergkamp marks 8.5 years without a safety incident

November 3, 2026

For over eight and a half years, every Bergkamp employee has finished every shift and gone home safe.

The company in October announced a milestone of eight and a half consecutive years with no safety incidents, a record well below U.S. industry averages.

According to the U.S. Bureau of Labor Statistics, the manufacturing sector's total recordable incident case rate reached 2.7 per one hundred full-time workers in 2024, exceeding the private-industry average of 2.3. In 2023, 391 workers in manufacturing lost their lives to workplace injuries. This zero-incidents achievement belongs to Bergkamp's dedicated employees.

From design and fabrication to finance and customer care, every Bergkamp employee has made safe practices part of their daily work and looked out for the people beside them.

"At Bergkamp, safety is embedded in the culture, everyone performs their craft safely. Our purpose is to make people's lives better by making roads better. That starts with developing safe equipment, implementing safe work practices to build the equipment and then training our customers to operate the equipment safely. This delivers a safe road for the public to use. Safety is built into everything we do. By celebrating this milestone, we recognize that everyone contributes to achieving a safe workplace," said Jason Bergkamp, CEO of Bergkamp.

Bergkamp's commitment to safety extends beyond its own walls. The company designs equipment with safety in mind, builds it using safe work practices, and trains customers to operate it safely, helping deliver safer roads for the traveling public.

Brad Johnson, Technical Representative and Bergkamp Safety Committee team lead, said, "Bergkamp does not cut corners when it comes to safety; it is priority number one." Johnson continued, "Members of our safety team do a fantastic job of constantly making improvements in our Safe Work Practices, keeping training up to date and regularly auditing the safety of our facilities."

To mark the occasion, Bergkamp celebrated its employees with a recognition ceremony, barbeque, and commemorative Bergkamp tool bag for every employee.

The company remains committed to continuing its safety record and strengthening the culture behind it. Founded in 1977 and based in Salina, Bergkamp designs and builds asphalt and pavement maintenance equipment for contractors and municipalities.

Known for its Slurry Seal and Micro Surfacing Pavers, Pothole Patchers, and Flow Boy Live Bottom trucks, the company also offers mobile mix plants, spreader boxes, and lab equipment, backed by parts, service, and training.

American-made and recognized globally for its signature orange equipment, Bergkamp serves customers worldwide.

Statewide amendment and judicial retention totals

Unofficial totals as of 11:15 a.m. Thursday.

Constitutional amendment (4,168 of 4,168 precincts): Yes, 672,162 votes (64%); no, 384,227 (36%). Under the ballot's explanatory statement, a yes vote "would clarify that only a person who is a citizen of the United States is eligible to vote in this state." A no vote "would make no change to the constitution of the state of Kansas."

Kansas Supreme Court: Chief Justice Eric S. Rosen (4,168 of 4,168 precincts), yes 612,963 (65%), no 327,151 (35%). Justice Larkin E. Walsh (4,168 of 4,168 precincts), yes 603,747 (65%), no 323,976 (35%).

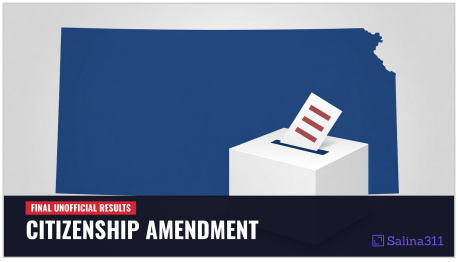

Kansas Court of Appeals: Statewide retention totals for judges Lori Ann Bolton Fleming, Kim R. Schroeder, Amy Fellows Cline, Lesley Ann Isherwood and Jacy J. Hurst were not posted with the state's unofficial results as of 11:15 a.m. Thursday.

What's next

Provisional ballots will be counted when each county board of canvassers meets, which must happen by Nov. 16. The State Board of Canvassers must certify the election by Dec. 1.

Citizenship amendment wins Saline County

November 4, 2026

Saline County voters supported a proposed amendment to the Kansas Constitution stating that only U.S. citizens may vote, 70% to 30%, in unofficial results.

The county's updated unofficial report, timed at 4:19 p.m. Thursday, showed 13,172 votes for the amendment and 5,593 against, out of 18,765 votes cast on the question. The count was not complete: Election Day votes were in from 54 of the county's 56 precincts, all partly counted, and early and absentee votes from 55 of 56.

Statewide, the amendment led 672,162 to 384,227, or about 64% to 36%, with all 4,168 precincts reporting, in unofficial statewide results as of 11:15 a.m. Thursday.

Saline County's yes share was about 6.6 percentage points higher than the statewide yes share.

What the amendment does

The measure, House Concurrent Resolution 5004, rewrites Article 5, Section 1 of the Kansas Constitution, which sets the qualifications of voters. The current wording says that "every citizen of the United States" who is at least 18 and lives in the voting area "shall be deemed a qualified elector."

The amendment changes that sentence to say that "no person shall be deemed a qualified elector unless such person" is a U.S. citizen, is at least 18 and, except in certain cases, lives in the voting area where the person seeks to vote.

The amendment does not change the voting age or the residency requirement. It keeps the existing exceptions that let Kansans who have recently moved vote for president from out of state under federal law, and that let voters who moved within Kansas shortly before an election vote at their former precinct. The rest of the changes replace "he or she" with "such person."

The explanatory statement printed on the ballot read: "This amendment would clarify that only a person who is a citizen of the United States is eligible to vote in this state. A vote for this proposition would clarify that only a person who is a citizen of the United States is eligible to vote in this state. A vote against this proposition would make no change to the constitution of the state of Kansas, and the language concerning voter qualifications would remain the same."

Results are unofficial

The results do not include provisional ballots, which county boards of canvassers will review by Nov. 16. Advance mail ballots postmarked by Nov. 3 and received by Friday, Nov. 6, could also be added. The State Board of Canvassers is scheduled to certify the general election results, including the amendment, on Dec. 1.

The Secretary of State's office will randomly select races, along with the constitutional amendment, for post-election audits, which counties conduct by hand-counting paper ballots from selected precincts.

Updated Thursday, Nov. 5, with Saline County results as of 4:19 p.m. Thursday and statewide results as of 11:15 a.m. Thursday.

Cozy Inn ruling clouds Salina murals

November 4, 2026

Brad Anderson with Salina Arts & Humanities says a federal appeals court ruling that sided with The Cozy Inn over its UFO-themed mural leaves him unclear what the decision means for future mural art in Salina.

A three-judge panel of the U.S. Court of Appeals for the 10th Circuit ruled Oct. 30 that Salina's sign code, as applied to the Cozy Inn mural, violated the First Amendment. The court affirmed a November 2025 ruling by U.S. District Judge Toby Crouse and said the city imposed a prior restraint on Cozy Inn owner Steve Howard's speech by leaving his permit application on hold for years.

Anderson told Salina311 that his office has long worked with local artists and businesses as a resource partner on mural work, including helping artists navigate the city's sign code during the Artwork Alley mural festival behind the Stiefel Theatre in 2022. He said Arts & Humanities does not regulate mural content unless it is directly commissioning the work.

When he saw the Cozy Inn mural and what he described as clear business-related signage, Anderson said he asked Leslie Bishop with Salina Downtown Inc. and Lauren Driscoll with the city's Development Services Department whether there was an approved permit. He said no permit had been applied for and the Design Review Board had not reviewed the concept.

Anderson said the City Commission will have a chance to direct staff on the consequences of the ruling when it meets Monday, Nov. 9.

His full statement to Salina311:

Our office had worked with local artists and businesses for many years as a resource partner regarding mural work. We made sure that the artwork done during the Artwork Alley mural festival behind the Stiefel Theatre in 2022 didn't interfere with current city of Salina sign code. Our reading and understanding of the sign code was that there was a clearly described difference between commercial and non-commercial speech, so we helped inform artists about that code.

When I saw the mural and clear business-related signage on the Cozy Inn, I asked Leslie Bishop from SDI and Lauren Driscoll from the city's Development Services Department if there was an approved permit for what seemed clear to me as a commercial sign for the business. Apparently, no permit was applied for, and no preliminary review of the concept was made by the Design Review Board.

Contrary to some public sentiment, Salina Arts & Humanities does not regulate content for any mural projects unless we are directly commissioning the work. Our job is to work within existing sign codes, rules, and ordinances that are part of the city's administrative structure, and when asked, we help artists to do the same.

I assume the court ruling means that the City will have to review their current sign code regulations and the impact it will have on future murals in the community. Because the courts have determined that there is no difference between murals and commercial signs, I am unclear what this means to future mural art in the city. Salina's sign code is very similar to many cities across the country, so this ruling has a much broader impact than one business. Our City Commission will have an opportunity to direct city staff regarding the consequences of the court's ruling when they meet on Monday, November 9. I hope there are opportunities for murals in the future.

Salina311 previously reported on the 10th Circuit ruling and reached out to Bishop and Driscoll for comment. Bishop said she was not clear what Anderson was referring to beyond that he asked early on whether she knew anything about the mural, and that she did not.

Salina Warns Planning Applicants of Fraudulent Payment Requests

November 4, 2026

Salina planning staff warned the Planning Commission and the public about fraudulent payment requests being sent to individuals who have submitted planning applications to the city. Staff said the scam has been ongoing for several months.

According to staff, the fraudulent messages may appear legitimate and may reference specific applications or upcoming or recent public hearings, asking applicants to pay invoices for supposed fees. Staff said the scammers appear to be using information from applications that are part of the public record, possibly using automated tools to read posted documents.

In response, the city has added a disclaimer to the second page of the commission's agenda, which staff read aloud and said will be read at meetings for the near future. The statement reminds applicants that all application fees are collected at the time of submission and that no additional application fees are due following a public hearing. It states the city will not request payment by wire transfer and that legitimate payment requests are communicated through the GovBuilt portal or directly by city staff using an email address ending in @salina.org.

The notice directs anyone who receives a suspicious payment request or has questions about fees to contact community and development services at 785-309-5715 or through the city's planning channels before making any payment.

Staff said the matter has been reported to the police department and asked that community members who hear of the scam encourage affected individuals to contact the department before paying anything. "We don't have a lot of control over actually stopping it, but it has been reported to PD," staff said, adding that staff is trying to make people aware of it.

Southeast of Saline cancels classes Thursday over water issues

November 5, 2026

USD 306 Southeast of Saline canceled school for Thursday, November 5, because of ongoing water issues.

The district announced the cancellation early Thursday morning and apologized to families for the inconvenience and the short notice.

to a news release from the school. For junior Camille Graber, who plays Hope, Glory, the Waitress and Suzette and serves as an assistant stage manager, that rotation is the main reason to come.

"Someone should come out to see the show because no matter which show you see, everything is different," Graber wrote in answers to questions from Salina311. "Some people like me, or Oscar, have the same scene twice, but we don't have the same scene partners, which makes it more interesting."

John Cariani's play is set on a cold winter night in Almost, Maine, a place so far north it is "almost in Canada," where residents fall in and out of love under the northern lights, according to the release. Graber and senior Ava Weaverling, who plays Gayle and Marci and is one of the show's stage managers, answered questions about their roles, rehearsals and what it is like to work both onstage and behind the scenes. Barbara Hilt, Salina Central's theater director and instructor, sent their answers along with rehearsal photos Nov. 2.

Graber described Glory, the role she focused on, as "a passionate person who doesn't always understand her feelings, but wants to do right for everyone." The part of Glory she relates to most, she wrote, is "Glory's inclination to talk really fast when she's nervous."

Rehearsals have had their lighter moments. "When rehearsing the more personal parts of the scene, I can't help but laugh which makes my scene partner laugh, and I often just giggle through the lines," Graber wrote.

Her favorite scene is "They Fell," she wrote, "because I think it's super funny."

Weaverling described her two characters in a sentence each. "Gayle is a girl who is fed up with the behavior of her boyfriend," she wrote. "Marci is a wife who is tired of feeling lonely."

What she shares with them, she wrote, is "their independence in their relationships."

"Both of my scenes consist of a woman putting their boyfriend/husband in their place," Weaverling wrote. "They are both women who do not take anything less than the bare minimum in their relationships and they are not afraid to speak their mind when they aren't receiving the best treatment."

The scene she most wants audiences to see is "This Hurts," which she described as being "about a girl who is in a toxic relationship and a boy who can't feel pain."

"They have a very cute touching scene with some comedic elements of physical comedy," she wrote. "This scene to me is just very witty and not what you would expect."

The two students described the double duty of acting and crew work differently.

For Graber, it has been a juggling act. "It has been kind of challenging to work with different scene partners, as well as memorizing," she wrote. "I feel like the amount of lines to memorize is about the same as a normal show, but it feels like more when there are four shows to keep up with. It is also hard to balance working on lines versus working on tech things because both need to get done by the same time."

For Weaverling, it has been a chance to grow into a second role. "I have always really loved acting but I have also begun to love being a stage manager," she wrote. "This show has given me the chance to do both. It has also been very fun to teach some of our other stage managers what it is like to be a stage manager."

Her pitch to audiences leans on the season. "If you are wanting to see something to get you into the snowy mood you should definitely come see Almost Maine," Weaverling wrote. "People should also come see the show multiple times because each night will be different."

Salina Planning Commission Approves Preliminary Plat for Evergreen Addition

November 4, 2026

The Salina Planning Commission voted unanimously to approve a preliminary plat for the Evergreen Addition, a proposed residential subdivision on a 12-acre tract of undeveloped land located southeast of the intersection of Cedar Ridge Drive and Murray Mount Road.

The application, identified as case PP26-006, was brought by applicant Brian Richardson. According to staff, the project is a combination and replat of two existing subdivisions, reconfiguring portions of block two and several lots within block three of the Cedar Ridge Addition, along with a segment of the existing Pinecrest Circle right-of-way, and tying in lot one, block six from the Mariposa Addition.

The plat reconfigures the property into 14 total lots, with 13 developable single-family home lots. Lot five, located in the northwest corner, will be a non-developable tract used strictly for storm water detention. The lots range in size from about 21,000 square feet to close to 61,000 square feet, according to the staff presentation.

The project introduces a new public street named Evergreen Terrace and reshapes the existing Pinecrest Circle into a dead-end cul-de-sac. Staff said the property is located within the city limits, directly north of the Great Life Golf Course, and that the proposal conforms with the comprehensive plan's suburban residential land use designation.

Staff noted the plat restricts direct driveway access onto Murray Mount Road, an arterial street, as well as along Cedar Ridge Drive, directing all property access to interior subdivision streets. A dedicated detention basin on lot five would restrict post-development storm water flows to slightly below the pre-development rate, according to the engineering study.

Staff recommended approval subject to six conditions, which include minor survey label corrections, relocating a proposed fire hydrant to Cedar Ridge Drive for better coverage, and ensuring a storm water maintenance agreement is legally recorded. Because the development is under 20 acres, the developer will pay a park fee in lieu of land dedication.

Responding to a question about timing, Richardson said the project schedule would depend on conditions and city commission consideration, estimating that work could begin in early spring. He said an existing homeowners association is in place for the surrounding area and that the new common area would be added.

The commission approved the preliminary plat unanimously. Seven of the commission's eight members were present.
